All human activity is prompted by desire

(Bertrand Russell)

The sequence of work will and wisdom in ancient canons has been propounded as follows
ज्ञान जन्या भवेदिच्छा इच्छा जन्या क्रियाभवेत्

Desire or let's say the process of desiring is caricatured on knowledge or wisdom. Desire in itself is not an immediate impetus specially among humans with a well developed cognitive system. All activities are preceded either by gnosis or by gnosis reinforced by will or vice versa. One knows, desires and acts – this is true in common parlance .In special cases however action is motivated by cognition intermediated by desire ,which owing to certain commitment can be isolated from the collective will into which the individual will as it were must have merged . Then there are the enlightened beings who have transcended individual will as well as cognition ,they are directly prompted by the principle of cosmic intelligence . .They comprise the mystic strata and are sought after in matters which lie beyond the domain of conventional reasoning.

The lowest substrata comprises simpletons who go by “learn as you work” maxim . Thus we have 6 combinations of www, the World Wide Web to log into the world of transcendence.

- 1.work will wisdom .
- 2.will work wisdom
- 3.wisdom will work .
- 4.will wisdom work
5. wisdom work will
6. work wisdom will !!

The last combination is that of Shiva or the perfect being. His Will is governed by his omniscience and leads to the flawless act of creation etc . Since his free will or swatantrya Shakti alone manifests in the three or five variants of his Shakti ,all Shakti’s and their produces seldom supersede their origin . The first disposition pertains to an empirical and finite soul in which action is prompted by imperfect knowledge and a “will “ exposed to various impediments. This enhances the erroneous output of the trio as misery, misgiving and misreading. Russel as a strict rationalist is oblivious of the will or desiring part of what he calls motivation . In the realm of absolute righteousness ,the trio of work will and wisdom is in a perfect rapport . gnosis action and will are not the three separate entities but the single Shakti who is inseparable from Shiva i.e. स्वातंत्र्यशक्ति with attributes as ज्ञान ,इच्छा ,क्रिया . So there is no possibility of fallacious aberrations . A disturbed harmony makes room for more errors and imperfections, thus ultimately a free fall into an abyss of the mire of objectivity . There are two more Shakti’s which are otherwise latent but manifest as the munificence of the preceptor or divine grace these are called परा and चित्शक्ति in Sanskrit . Dawning of these two upon an aspirant can orientate his pursuits of identifying with his essential nature which as we’ve said above has all three functions viz gnosis, will and action in a conducive order and in a perfect equilibrium . Without such axiomatic renderings of deep metaphysical import human kind would have remained locked in the fetters of dry quantitative ratiocination forever, where as the qualia of spiritual splendour would have always remained beyond the imagination of human kind . In a simpleton’s verbiage balamba the almighty manifest as a small girl governing the state of world affairs with her noose of desire, goad of knowledge, rosary and book of action.

“All human actions are prompted by desires” says Bertrand Russel but the question is what does the process of desiring depend on. Can an individual will be responsible for ever-rising multifarious desires? What causes the desire to raise its head again just after it is fulfilled. Does it mean that it hasn’t really been gratified? These questions and many similar ones have engaged the best scholarly and philosophical brains all over the world since ages. The thin line between willing, desiring, wanting craving and obsessing keeps shifting its goal-post all the time, confusing humanity as it does so. Schopenhauer aptly describes unagency of a man in the words, “Man can do what he wills but he cannot will what he wills.” Indirectly he stresses on the fact that the ultimate control of an individual will does not lie with the individual himself. Here one is reminded of his ideas of two wills , will and WILL. The former designates the will of an individual while the latter denotes the will of the universe. According to him the reason for all the misery and strife in the human life lies in the fact that most of the times the individual will does not resonate with the universal WILL, hence all the time one is fighting against the inevitable and in consequence creating immense dissonance and anxiety. Thus to rise beyond the ‘Human Condition’ is paramount to ultimate peace and bliss. It is evident how deeply Schopenhauer was moved by the philosophy of Upanishads.

Explaining the notion we begin with the insightful editorial by our Guru Maharaj, Swami Paranand Tirth ji on the nature of desire and will and the possibility of merging it with the absolute will “The first disposition (work, will wisdom) pertains to an empirical and finite soul in which action is prompted by imperfect knowledge and a “will “ exposed to various impediments. This enhances the erroneous output of the trio as misery, misgiving and misreading..”writes Swamiji

Following this we have an enlightening article titled ‘Yogic Sleep: The Trance of Superconsciousness’ by Swamiji which succinctly explains the notion of yognidra and sixteen states of awareness in an initiated yogi.

Next we have a heartfelt translation of a Kashmiri poem by Samad Mir on Ma Tara by Rashneek Kher interspersed with factual passages. The ponderings of Suva, an Indian artist based in Finland titled ‘Ruminative Sound Form’ and his philosophical pyrography sound sculptures give us a glimpse in the artistic wisdom and intuition. A passage from his manuscript titled ‘Thoughts Performs Actions’ discusses his ideas about the concepts like ‘identity’ and ‘wisdom.’

Next up there is translation and exposition on six karikas from Ishwar Pratibhijna Karika by Utpaladeva from the YTA study circle. A brief insight into the online classes conducted by YTA is next which is followed by a passionate poem titled ‘Dance as beacon of love’ by Prof Ambika Talwar, eulogizing the mystic dance of freedom and bliss it showers on the dancers.

Yogic Sleep: The Trance of Superconsciousness

Swami Paranand Tirth

*Fana sahasra rachite nag paryank

Yah shete yog asthay tasmai nidratmane namah.

1 Sleeping in Superconsciousness

Prostrations to the lord, the personification of sleep. Who sleeps in a yogic trance on the bed formed by shesa with his thousand hoods.

The biggest contrast between yog nidra and conventional sleep is that the former is a produce of essential purity or satoguna where as the latter comes from tamas or inertia and nescience. Modern neuroscience has discovered that during the usual dreamless or other types of sleeps there is a huge destruction of neurons. In the yogic trance which is also a form of mild superconsciousness there is an automatic patterning of the neurons that delays the process of switching over to the conventional sleep, dream or waking. Some neurologists claim this through auto suggestion and hypnosis. We don't want to go into the detail of refuting this at the moment but if we went by the definition of nidra or sleep in the revelations, like, the yogasutra of patanjali, it is a thought construe based on the experience of total negation. This is naturally a pure subjective awareness, at times even devoid of any taint or conditioning of objective awareness. Oriental mystics have defined the experience of deep and dreamless sleep in concise as follows.

I slept happily and knew nothing.
All relative happiness and unhappiness lies within the domain of objective phenomena which in turn comprises most and some of the waking and dreaming stages. As per one mystic canon all four states are further interlaced in each of the four states.

Thus there are sixteen states:

1. Waking waking
2. Dream in waking
3. Sleep in waking.
4. Superconsciousness waking
5. Waking in dream
6. Dream in dream
7. Sleep in dream
8. superconsciousness in dream
9. Waking in sleep
10. Dreaming in sleep
11. Sleeping in sleep
12. Superconsciousness in sleep
13. Waking in superconsciousness
14. Dreaming in superconsciousness
15. Sleep in superconsciousness and
16. Superconsciousness in the trance of superconsciousness

These are the sixteen states of awareness in an initiated yogi. What we refer to as yog nidra is the sixteenth one. All these above mentioned "states" frequent and alternate arbitrarily. This arbitrariness is determined by the law of karma as some sects of the Hindu religion propounds it. This giant wheel of the above mentioned state is rotated by impetus of the karmas. Ancient texts of non-dualism do not attribute this process only to the karmas but also to nescience and desire. Karma in turn is governed by two more agencies namely, Avidya and Kama. Both lead to karma successively. Some post shankarite thinkers attribute avidya to sleep, kama to desire and karma to awaking. The taintless subjective awareness interlaces these three or rather sixteen modes of awareness which are entirely different from one another.

Being the pivot for all other states, the state of sleep or dreamless sleep is mentioned as the ultimate by sidhh Swatantranand Nath, the author of Matrika Chakra Viveka. There is a concept of two types of sleeps, shiv swapam and pashu swapam. The sleep of an enlightened being and that of a pashu or bonded man.

Maheshwaranand in his Maharth Manjari or the bouquet of great import says that a yogi wears this garland of various states around his neck interlaced in the thread of vimarsha or incessant awareness of ones shivahood.

2 The Self Evident Gnosis

The testimony of evidence in the case of a supra mental experience cannot be any revelation or revelationability (offenderubg offenderkeit). The subjective experience, as such, requires no objective evidence for its vindication. This is the point beyond which the realm of authenticity of the agamas or lineage of the esoteric knowledge replaces the exoteric testimony of evidence of the revelation. The threshold of exoteric and esoteric interpretation of the word must be crossed before the direct experience of anything that is transcendental in its symbol and substance can be drawn. One popular vedic mantra pertaining to the fire god as pervading all mortals in the form of speech or vak has two renderings. The conventional one just describes Agni as a two headed, four horned, three legged deity, who has seven arms. The great god roars time and again and dawns upon the mortals as the faculty of speech. Revelations have their root in the consciousness as it finds grosser expressions, there is a considerable separation of word and meaning. For any experience to be a self gnostic subjective awareness, absolute convergence of the word and its meaning in the form of nada or the point of absolute convergence of word and the point of absolute convergence of collective meaning or bindu -both must be in perfect unison. Awareness as such cannot be beyond these two specifications. This has been mentioned as chitsanghat or the consolidation of the mind matter which leads to the state of witnessing the sleep or the state of zero objectivity. It goes without saying that the state of no objective conditioning is also a state of pure subjective awareness or with a slight tinge of objectivity in a latent seed form. Drishya swap is the state of supra mental transcendence and its vision is also a pure supramental phenomena.

Neuroscientists explain the process in their own objective manner. There is a nerve which is facilitated during the state of dreamless sleep and truncated as soon as one gets up. This nerve is very long in a new born child and strangely enough, gets shorter and shorter as a person grows up. It is too early to conclude anything as of now but this phenomena may scientifically vindicate the existence of a Brahmanadi (the nerve of Brahman) that leads the soul to the abode of Brahman.

The ultimate objective of yoga or upasana is to streamline the awareness and make it so fine that it pervades and flows along the brahmnadi also called Susumna. Why we mentioned the neuroscientific aspect is to emphasize that upto susumna it can be observed even objectively as nanometers, attometers or femtometer in diameter but beyond this the subtlety is perceivable only psychically. Some ancient arcane canons of mysticism give us the details of three more nadis situated, as it were, in a concentric manner. First one is called Shankhini, second Vajrini and the third is Chitra, within which the twilight zone of the unison of microcosmic and macrocosmic phenomena exists. This realm is depicted in a grosser manner by various analogies, semiotics and iconography. A sleeping female serpent which awakens to transcend the conventional phenomena, an array of triangles formed by the intersection of five inverted and four upright triangles called Shrichakram, which contains the entire universal phenomena so forth and so on. This is a complex configuration of various patterns of the Energy of Consciousness.

3. Some tips on transcending the conventional perception.

The juncture of dreamless sleep and dreaming is considered as an experience of great metaphysical import. Swapnantam me somya vijaneehi. O! benign one know the realm beyond dreams from me. The seer is not merely describing the state verbally to his son, he is sharing his experience of total transcendence of the conventional phenomena as well as the experience of unison with the ultimate substratum i.e. a pure subjective awareness. The only means and mode of communication is through inducing his own experience into the supra rational awareness of the novice. The Upanisad declares the supreme truth of the subjective consciousness as impossible to be conveyed through any conventional means. Owing to the pure subjective nature, the supreme self has no attributes hence devoid of any attribute such as genus, function, character, relation, semblance, etc. The conventional mode of cognition is of no avail, being beyond the definability of the cognitive apparatus, this knowledge cannot be imparted. Therefore, the only way of assimilating it is through bringing in faith, firstly in the existent nature of the self and then in the dictum that it must be assimilated as one's own subjective nature. This in turn leads to the negation of all objectivity in toto and thus the placid, non dual Shiva requires to be learnt as one's own essential nature through an intuitive insight that comes from the preceptor.

4. The cross road of transcendence meditation on the psychic orifice in the epiglotis.

Without a mystic insight, that comes invariably from an enlightened source, the familiarization of the mystic path is next to impossible. Such knacks to lead a novice directly into the cult of spiritual experience are called upayas and are highly discreet and esoteric. This being an inlet into the pure transcendent, all realms is also related with the syllable, ka, kappa or the cross. Ka is written as cross + sign in ancient brahmi characters. Perhaps the first deliberately pronounced syllable ever in the evolution of the human faculty of expression is ka and as it is pronounced there is a constriction in a specific part of the vocal apparatus. From a metaphysical view point this phenomena is significant.

5. Being Shiva by the time you pronounce half of the aspirata

The awareness has to be focused on a point on the tongue tip or throat plexus and then the point of converging awareness is moved upwards at the root of the palate there is a 'orifice on the tip of the larynx, this is a highly mystic crossroad, a spiritual cross which leads to four different realms of waking, sleeping, dreaming and transcendence.

There is an arcane school of sufism they call it safr e oojuli or the spiritual journey. There must be such secret short cuts to each of the destination. Safr e ujooli pertains to both going and coming back whereas the ultimate safr is cutting the rope. Setting sail into the ocean of eternity once and for all times.

Yoga nidra is a state some where on the sojourn. Where all impressions of Objectivity are erased from the mind but complete absorption into the causal state has not taken place as yet.

Anagatayam nidrayam
Pranaste bahya gochare
Savasta manasa gamya
Para devi prakashate .
(Vijñan bhairava)

There are elaborate details of all intermediate experiences in the tantric canons. Myriad states can be conceptualised between what is called the mindful and mindless states of awareness i.e. Samani and Unmani. Unmani is pure unconditioned awareness whereas Samani is tainted with the conditioning that comes with identification with mind and its produces. All efforts are within the domain of mindful awareness beyond this i.e. in the state of mindlessness it is spontaneous and effortless. All efforts would hurl the awareness of the aspirant in the mind conditioning realm.

These three states of the mystics have been depicted as analogous to the three modes of vak by Maheshwar Abhinav Gupta. So the state of zero objectivity without complete dissolution is pashyanti .which culminates into Para, if there is no dissolution into the causal state.

Vyasa's laya yoga

There are various and various ontologies regarding the power and process of creation and for that matter to meditate on the process of dissolution .This one predates shankara monism and has been attributed to Vyasa hence the name vaasya laya yoga. Although the axiom of adhyaropa pavad, applies to this as much as it does to the popular panchikaran method of transcending the three states - laya yoga follows a bit different ontology of the objective phenomena that needs to be transcended through it . Instead of the three states and there corresponding gross subtle and casual manifestation of the universal phenomena visit laya yoga has a vishwa, mahat and Ahankar.

This method traces back the process of creation reversing the order of creation .five elements dissolve into ether five perception into the three fold Ahankar which merges into mahat (cosmic intelligence) mahat into avyaktam or the unmanifest.

Samad Mir's Taravatiy

Rashneek Kher

On a lazy Sunday we were tuned into Radio Sharda(a community radio of Kashmiri Pandits).Moti Lal Kemmu's (a renowned scholar and an expert on Folk Theatre of Kashmir) interview was being broadcast . The interview was interspersed with requests of songs by Mr.Kemmu. He requested for Samad Mir's poem "Praran praran Tarawatiye".It was sung by Ama Kandur in Chakri(Kashmiri folk music) style. Though I had read many of Samad Mir's poems I hadn't heard of this one till then.

The poem describes Goddess Tara, her iconography and her attributes. I have heard from some people that Samad Mir's Tarawati is a Kashmiri Pandit woman (who he might have seen or known) which is erroneous as we will soon discover. While he has contextualized the deity in Kashmiri environs yet the description is essentially of the one who he describes as the "Goddess who emerged victorious in Bengal".

Goddess Tara (one of the Dash-Mahavidhyas) is primarily a Hindu Goddess who later manifests in Buddhist iconography as well, but the Goddess described by our poet is the one as she is described and worshipped in the Hindu pantheon. To be more precise the description matches the idol of the Goddess at the shrine of Tarapitha (in Bengal).The worship of Goddess Tara is not unknown to Kashmiris. Even today there are atleast two villages in South Kashmir which owe its origin to this Goddess- The village of Tarigom near Kulgam(which now has no traces of any temple) and the village of Taragom near Qazigund(which has a living temple of considerable antiquity considering the stone sculptures and a spring dedicated to the deity).

I attempt to translate the poem.

Praran praaran tarawatiyay,aitay nazaar traav

Kharran poozaye jhafer phateye,aitay nazaar traav*

For long have I sought thee, Reveal thy true self to me
O! Tarawati,

Caskets of marigolds will I entreat you with, Reveal thy true self to me

*The sculpture of Goddess (at the Tarapitha Shrine) is adorned with garlands of marigold flowers

Durdaane lab lal yim chey vathey,khande seet maey vaseraav

Tim chey chamkaan aadam raateye,aitay nazaar trav

Your parted pearl like lips, glowing red with human blood*

Deter me not with that mirage (of external manifestation), Reveal thy true self to me

(* In Mundmala Tantra,Goddess is described as consuming human as well as animal blood. She is said to be fonder of human blood, which is always on her lips. This has esoteric meaning and should not be fallaciously understood by its literal meaning.)

*Kamane abrunis alifiy khatye,zamaney maey katraav

Yim Chasme siya chey aafatey, aitag nazaar trav

Eyebrows like arrows on a bow, dark eyes symbolizing annihilation

With scissors of spiritual transcendence, Reveal thy true self to me

(* The goddess carries scissors in one of her hands with which she cuts the weed of desire and propels her devotees on the path of transcendence)

Yim naeze acharvalav maey ditey,tim doptham vateraav

Bhi mare korthas che taem bharketey, aitag nazaar trav

Piercing, your eyelashes, that as boon you bestowed (on me)

Freed me from the bondage of death, Reveal thy true self to me

Aath dare paeth chakh shubaan latiye,paanas kareth paeraav

Kripaye aes aaye aavbhagatay, aitag nazaar trav

Resplendent, in your beauty, Adorable, you sit by the window

We beseech your divine grace, Reveal thy true self to me

*Mahtaab royas kareth chaaye gateye,aftaab mandechith draav

Sadaye vodunay prazlaan sitare phateye, aitag nazaar trav

Circumambulating your moonlike radiant face, dwarfed and disgraced felt the sun

A galaxy lies strewn on your tippet, Reveal thy true self to me

(*In Buddhist iconography the Goddess sits in the orb of the moon with sun forming the exterior orb. This verse could be a reference to that)

Daeke tike chyon di lach laal pateye,taakaene haej maey thaav

Zulfan Tal chay noorich bateye, aitag nazaar trav

Thy orb (ajna chakra) is a million rubies,O hide it not(under your headgear)

Beneath the darkness (of your black hair) shines gnosis, Reveal thy true self to me

Kad chyon shamshad Tan sheeshe dateye,seemab tatey mandechaav

Seene aayenay naare pistaan rateye, aitag nazaar traav*

Intense you are, glowing brighter than mercury

Smeared with blood, breasts shining (like fire), Reveal thy true self to me

*Since her lips are open (as mentioned in the second verse-lab chey vathey) blood keeps oozing out and after falling on her breasts it resembles fire.

Tot aaye aashiq naendere hateye, Kate chak te kya chuy naav*

Sandere tyake chane chanderaymateye, aitay nazaar traav

Bereft of sleep, your devotees seek (you), bewildered and mesmerized

In rapture, by the grace of vermillion (on your forehead), Reveal thy true self to me

*The opportune time to invoke the blessings of the Goddess is between midnight and breaking of dawn, which explains why devotees are bereft of sleep (naendere hateye)

Yim Chah Afsoone Saaz aaye paatiye, Bengaale zyunuth daav

Yim naeze kaem jodugaaran ditiye, aitay nazaar traav

You the embodiment of art, who reigns over Bengal

What hath gave thy absolute wisdom, Reveal thy true self to me

In the concluding two verses the poet teaches us about the means with which one can realize the Goddess

Saat paaev haer khas pateye pateye, lageeth che daentuv khraav

Zoone dabe baethek nich bhagwateye, aitay nazaar traav*

Rise through the seven chakras of Kundlani, purified like ivory

Awakened, you will realize the Goddess, Delve into thyself

*There are seven ladders in awakening (Jagriti) of self. It is called the rise of Kundalini. He/She who reaches the highest ladder (Sahasrar Chakra) is considered the realized one and the one who sits (metaphorically) near his/her deity.

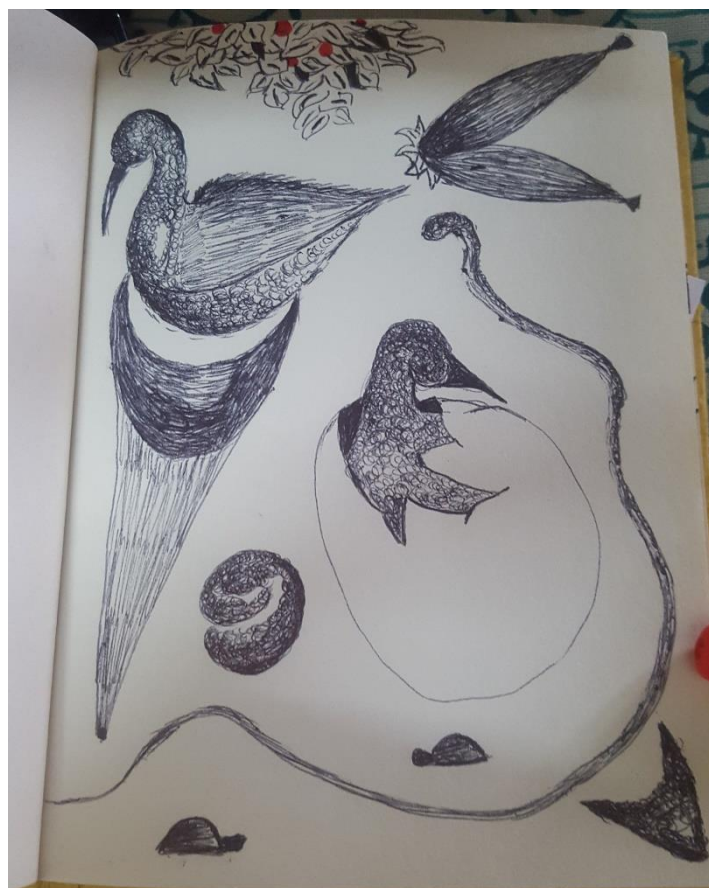

Yehlok manz kar kar adityae, Parlok manz parkhaav

Nish Samad Miras haech zagratye, aitay nazaar traav

Perfect this art here, triumphant will you emerge there

From Samad Mir, learn the art of awakening (the kundalini), Delve into thyself

Ruminative Sound Form

Suva (Perfo Philo Suva)

Suva (Perfo Philo Suva)

Newest sound instrument sculpture in process! some images from the current stage in the process of assembling the pieces, which are having the pyrography motifs in detail! And few more images with the recent and final feature! possibility of a slight string like addition in the beginning of the third week of July! Besides , many of my sound instruments carry the title in the form of adjective or verb , I don't use pronoun in any of those! For this piece the title is a sentence - " Ruminative Sound form"

Suva, performs at live events around Finland and Europe, often in collaboration with musicians and sound artists. The sculptures seen in this exhibition are engraved using a burning metal stylo in a technique called pyrography. They are often played as experimental musical instruments in performances in a variety of techniques, including with a bow and using tabla-like tapping rhythms reminiscent of the artist's Indian origins.

Originally from Shillong, Meghalaya and based in Helsinki since 2009, Suva's performances explore common grounds, often with a poetic and theoretical context concerning social, cultural and political

A Passage from Suva's manuscript – "Thoughts Performs Actions"

Suva (Perfo Philo Suva)

We are being laid in the third space of identity, which we are yet to identify. Our identity is technically handled, bound in a culture conscious state. Our Identity is layered with an Armour of defense mechanism, implanted with the influence of lingual patent. Our identity is caged in a geographic locational sentiment, affected by the chromosome of climatic phenomena. Our identity is forced into the compact disc of labeled religions, where the atmosphere of spiritual consciousness is painstakingly contaminated with patterned norms. Our identity is costumed with the stuffed belief system and ostracized, out of the circles, when we become seekers. Our identity is dissected into the generalized forum of differences and woefully we get placed, when we discover our unified diversity. Our identity is numerically lined, being categorically sentenced by the invisible cell of paperworks. Our identity rests on the authorship of genetically shimmering tectonic plane, that which is lost in the voidistic space of zodiacs. Our identity is ruthlessly glorified within the over-emphasized nature of gendered domains. Our identity is prized in the hegemonic hierarchy of flesh and blood. Our identity is disposed to the Othering of our self and detonated at the border of confrontation coated with illusion. Our identity is no longer beneficial, unless we recognize the soul entity which enriches in being Human

This domain of wisdom, ever since had been, in patent, onto the venomous files of knowledge. We know that wisdom has been always vested in the colloquial costume of common sense. Then this domain functioned in the sphere of verbal performance. That has been a phase evident with oral tradition and alongside there has been the freedom for interpretation, of a particular thought ingredient – in other words a stage of improvisation. The moment, knowledge invaded the simplistic organic form of wisdom, knowledge contaminated the mode of existence, by branding the wisdom in the dungeon of catalogs, frames and uniforms. In other words knowledge colonized the sensitive organs of wisdom, the rights diminished. Wisdom is like the flame which was passed on from generation to generation by the lanes of heritage; until the interference of knowledge staged a catastrophic demand of the active prospects, transforming the entire mode into passive energetic mines. Wisdom was based on growth of individual, whereas knowledge diverted into the prudent personification of individualism. Wisdom reinforced our self awareness, self esteem and took us into the realm of our-selves. Knowledge ransacked, replacing with selfish acknowledgement of our cultivation, into ceaseless taxation and increased the revenue by forming an epidemic of academic monstrosity. Knowledge reigned high as mechanical pesticide, crushing the good bacterias that could have been a sound survival manure for sustenance.

We are accustomed to assume our previous birth state and presume the aftermath of death, involving the circumstantial situation of our physical plane. Our physical plane is a labour force run by the mental faculty. This functioning body is a managing booth of inevitable space, time and mannerisms of happening activities. A lot happens or remains static in the circumnavigation of existential paradigm. Our journey relies quite much on this constitution in rotundity. Besides such speculations, we are interwoven in the phenomena of mental and physical properties that which links us to the anatomy of life, that reconsiders a shared space amidst this governing body. When we look into what we know as health, in most cases the effect and cause revolves around these circuits of connection. As humans we do not have access to the ground level in recalling the past or previous life cycle or to reveal the impact-oriented post of future dynamics. So that brings us to the mid ways which we know as present. Therefore we, generally keep aside our sub-conscious, unconscious and supraconscious catalog, to dust out only our present consciousness. Our being in this consciousness relates to the “gift” of life, often in a transitory phase of pleasant and unpleasant catharsis. This depends on the umbrella-form of our circumstance that triggers our modes, methods, means and mannerisms. We therefore get enlisted as passengers in the vehicle of reaction

Translation and Exposition:

There is an interjection from skeptics and determinists, they opine that the idea of self as eternal and conscious in nature is not consistent. Eternity and self-luminance are not evident . Since only such notions of gnosis as appearance, doubt, recognition, recollection or discovery of an object say for example a jar or ghatam , can be consistent but not in the case of eternity or illuminant nature or the self .such gnosis is called sabhilapam vikalpa or expressible ideation .The cause of varieties in ideation or vikalpa has been defined as abhilapa by Abhinavgupta and manifests in the form of expressible word . Such vikalpa is also multifarious and not dual .

Translation and Exposition:

A theist or atma vadin justifies his point thus, " If an eternal self were not to be there ,how can there be a recollection of an experience even after the stimulus has come to an end .thus there must an atman who is eternal and the experience of the stimulus"

As we recollect the experience of a stimulus the stimulus as such is absent or it has ended. When the recollection occurs which retains the experience of a previous experience even then the reproduction of that experience cannot take place . It is consistent only because there is a self who is the ultimate experienter of various experiences which take place at various times. The notion of aham as the previous karika says pertains only to body etc this is a common place experience . The existence of a self or atma has been denied by the atheists on the grounds that the experience of any eternal witness is not there . The counterargument given here is that of the recollection . Even after the experience is not there the recollection of the previous experience or experiences can be possible since the self or atman is the substratum of even the apparatuses of cognition including recollection of memory .

Translation and Exposition:

Vindicating the existence of the atman which interlaces the preceding experience and the consequent one even after the preceding one has lasted – without the continuation of the stream line of consciousness that underlines the two and for that matter the trail of experiences and thus accounts for their memory there should be no recollection . This is possible only when there is an eternal soul who experiences the preceding as well the consequent experience .

Even if there has to be an atma and the process if experience is attributed to him ,recollection follows from the experience itself . Since it is possible only due to the impressions of past experiences therefore to what avail is the concept of a self. It is a useless tinsel Charvaks and Buddhists deny the existence of a self or atma .Charvaka opines that only the body is the atma which has been discussed in the preceding karikas as 'the notion of 'I' pertains to body etc. the negation of atman is justified as the continuation of memory of an experience cannot be there if there is no eternal atma . The atheist refutes this and says only the impressions of past experience is sufficient for the recollection. This is so even in the case of an atma vadi [theist] so the concept of an atma in this context is of no avail . Even if there is no eternal self the witness of experience the recollection and reproduction takes place any way .

This is another argument in support of the futility of the concept of an eternal soul . Even as a resort of virtues different from pleasure and pain etc. the concept of atman is of no avail . Since these virtues do not make the self any special i.e. make no difference in him . The process of recollection can be explained just by the samskara or the remnants of impression in the mind .There is no need of conceptualizing any separate recollecting entity

Questions

Q1. Define Abhilapa and Vikalpa?

Q2. The skeptic says even if the eternal atma is refuted the continuation of experience can be attributed to

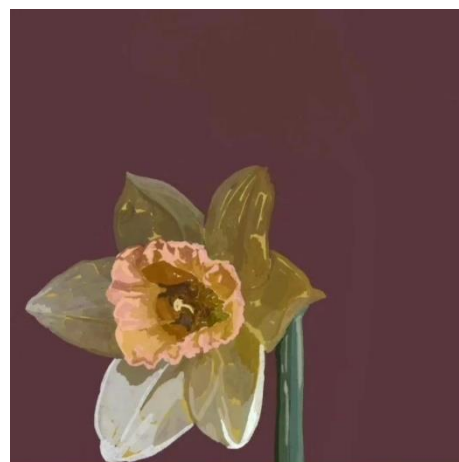

- a Intellect
- b Memory
- c Sanskara
- d None of these

Q3. The subjective notion doesn't pertain to any atma since it is not there on other hand

- a It is merely ego
- b A produce of nescience
- c Culminates with identification with gross body etc
- d All of the above

Q4. Even an atmavadi theist maintains that recollections arise from sanskaras or impressions so

- a there has to be an atma
- b no need of asserting an atma
- c being or not being of atma is irrelevant
- d conceptualizing an atma to prove the phenomena of recollection is unnecessary.

A brief insight in the online classes conducted by YTA

In the Yogtantragama Study Circle we read and discuss many arcane texts in the divine guidance of our Guru Maharaj Swami Paranand Tirth ji. Swamiji reads and explains the metaphysical import of these texts along with conventional commentaries.

Currently we are studying the Prayog Dipika of Prapanchsara Tantra and Nityashodasikarnava. While the former text sheds light on the ritual processes of Prapanchsara Tantra, the latter one is an important text of Srividya.

In last few months we have completed the study of Yogpada of Mrgendra Agama, Prapanchsara Tantra and 11th Chapter of Tantraloka. Though the classes are in sanskrit with a little patience and self study one can immensely benefit from them. Anyone interested to join us may please request Swamiji for the link.

Whirling Dervish: Dance of Bliss

Dance as Beacon of Love

~ Ambika Talwar

I rejoice when dance moves my body into new forms before the sun rises curl of gown, arms flung in air and feet disappear – as of dervish.
 Like wheels of a plane taking off tuck under large whale belly.
 Dervish is lifted into eternity;
 his rainbow fish, his halo envelope
 the dance – he is a beacon of love.
 Let beaded mala, rosary fall into oblivion and become stars as roses scatter in the sky, frequency so high lifting aged stories into timelessness.
 Stars comets weave fiery fractals,

DNA of love, many-colored metta.

Wisdom plays spirals of magic in us.
Our destiny it is to be free and whole.
Ecstatic is nature's gift to our human desire for supplication. Surrendering we are empty bowl – free of warlocks.
Rejoice my Beloved! Rejoice so our limbs move as heavenly spheres in tune with love's harmonics – our manifest destiny.
